February 2-4th, 2007

University of Washington, Seattle

Bringing Climate and Clean Energy Activism to the Northwest

Join us at the first ever, Northwest Climate Justice Summit, hosted by the Sierra Student Coalition with the support of the Energy Action Coalition.

During the past several years, the youth climate movement has been sweeping campuses across the country. It's time to bring it to the Northwest in full force. To fight global warming, we need to act TOGETHER and NOW.

Join us to...

- Get Skillz. Experienced SSC student organizers will run workshops on starting student organizations, working with the media, strategic campaign planning to set yourself up for a win, green policies you can push for, and much more!
- Connect with allies. Help build a strong, active, and successful network of student climate activists in the Northwest.
- Get inspired. Witness the human side in the fight against global warming- listen to Faith Gemmill from Alaska speak about how climate change and dirty energy production has effected her native community.
- Share experiences. See how other students in the Northwest have responded to the challenge- learning from each other's work to bring clean energy, efficiency, and renewables to campus.
- Make friends. Eat delicious food and have a grand time with cool, new, like-minded students from across the region.
- Learn the Issues. Activists from across the region will speak about dirty energy issues in the Northwest and how students can take action locally- including fossil fuel activism in Oregon and along the Columbia River.
- Hear the Rumble of a Movement. Listen to awesome speakers in the Climate Movement, including leaders of the Energy Action Coalition and Sierra Club as well as Seattle's own Mayor Greg Nickels- creator of the Mayor's Climate Protection Agreement.
